

To my descendants, I offer myself to share an informed message with you. The educated ones are the elders who passed before you. Their expertise, competencies and achievements have elevated our lives to a higher plane. I have learned that we need to motivate you to follow suit. Your happiness and success greatly depend on your inheritance. The wise person has strong faith that all of you will carry on and thrive based on your ancestors. The wise will prefer to dwell amid chances for education, joy, achievement, and wealth. After obtaining the appropriate knowledge, you must transfer it to the next generation. Your abilities, knowledge, success, and riches compared to others. The wise will always accompany you. Along your travels, the wise will offer guidance and assistance. Go out now and champion the idea that education is essential for success, that caring for others harms wealth, that kindness is fundamental, and that love is obligatory. This is intended for you as my descendants, your descendants, and those of the future. I, the wise, wish you all true happiness and success.